A concluding chapter provides a select bibliography on language and learning across the curriculum FL      The Conditions of Learning and Theory of Instruction Robert Mills Gagné, 1985 This book seeks to answer the question what factors really can make a difference to instruction A serious consideration of practical knowledge of learning must go beyond the most general principles of the learning process such as contiguity and reinforcement Learning results in retained dispositions which have different properties which the author calls capabilities Their five main varieties are called intellectual skills cognitive strategies verbal information motor skills and attitudes The second theme relating to the factors that make a difference to instruction may be identified as the events of learning The book is addressed to a fairly broad student audience      Selected Models of Developmental Education Programs in Higher Education Vernon L. Farmer, Wilton A. Barham, 2001-04-11 Selected Models of Developmental Education Programs in Higher Education includes models that are based on defensible theories about how students grow and develop at all levels of the learning continuum. These models emphasize the theories and concepts that underlie developmental education as a field of practice and research with a theoretical foundation in developmental psychology and learning theory. The theory-based models consist of methods and techniques for implementing developmental education activities and ways of creating environments intended to improve developmental students' learning outcomes. These models include a rationale, a theory that justifies the models, and an explanation of how the models are designed. The rationale is supported by empirical evidence that the models work. These models were selected because they represent varied frames of reference toward educational goals and objectives. Therefore, this book is a valuable resource for scholars, researchers, educators, and practitioners seeking to improve developmental students' learning outcomes in developmental education programs in institutions of higher education.
