Proceedings Of The Second Conference Of International Organization Of Citrus Virologists:

FAO/IBPGR Technical Guidelines for the Safe Movement of Citrus Germplasm Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 1991 Collecting conservation and utilization of plant genetic resources and their global distribution are essential components of international crop improvement programmes Inevitably the movement of germplasm involves a risk of accidentally introducing plant quarantine pests along with the host plant material in particular pathogens that are often symptomless such as viruses pose a special risk In order to minimize this risk effective testing indexing procedures are required to ensure that distributed material is free of pests that are of quarantine concern The ever increasing volume of germplasm exchanged internationally coupled with recent rapid advances in biotechnology has created a pressing need for crop specific overviews of the existing knowledge *Landwirtschaftliches Zentralblatt / Abteilung II.
