Schopp, 2018-03-13 It is not often recognized that China was one of the few places in the early modern world where all merchants had equal access to the market This study shows that private traders regardless of the volume of their trade were granted the same privileges in Canton as the large East India companies All of these companies relied to some extent on private capital to finance their operations Without the investments from individuals the trade with China would have been greatly hindered Competitors large and small traded alongside each other while enemies traded alongside enemies Buddhists Muslims Catholics Protestants Parsees Armenians Hindus and others lived and worked within the small area in the western suburbs of Canton designated for foreigners Cantonese shopkeepers were not allowed to discriminate against any foreign traders In fact the shopkeepers were generally working in a competitive environment providing customer oriented service that generated goodwill friendship and trust These contributed to the growth of the trade as a whole While many private traders were involved in smuggling opium others such as Nathan Dunn were much opposed to it The case studies in this volume demonstrate that fortunes could be made in China by trading in legitimate items just as successfully as in illegitimate ones which tellingly suggests that the rapid spread of opium smuggling in China could be a result of inadequate rather than excessive regulation by the Qing government For this absorbing book Van Dyke and Schopp have convened excellent scholars junior and senior to throw new light on the foreign merchants outside the East India companies who shaped China's engagement with the world at least as much as the companies men did if not more The slumbering field of foreign trade in Qing China has come back to life Timothy Brook University of British Columbia Much scholarship on the China trade has focused on the activities of the vast state sponsored companies This book flips the script Now we know that right under the noses of those economic behemoths smaller private traders from Europe America and China were quietly reshaping the trade with their innovation networking grit and dreams John R Haddad The Pennsylvania State University      Program of the Annual Meeting - American Historical Association American Historical Association, 1980 Some programs include also the programs of societies meeting concurrently with the association      Program of the ... Scott Appleby, Kathleen Sprows Cummings, 2012-11-15 Over the course of the twentieth century Catholics who make up a quarter of the population of the United States made significant contributions to American culture politics and society They built powerful political machines in Chicago Boston and New York led influential labor unions created the largest private school system in the nation and established a vast network of hospitals orphanages and charitable organizations Yet in both scholarly and popular works of history the distinctive presence and agency of Catholics as Catholics is almost entirely absent In this book R Scott Appleby and Kathleen Sprows Cummings bring together American historians of race politics social theory labor and gender to address this lacuna detailing in cogent and wide ranging essays how Catholics negotiated gender relations raised children thought about war and peace navigated the workplace and the marketplace and imagined their place in the national myth of origins and ends A long overdue corrective Catholics in the American Century restores Catholicism to its rightful place in the American story
