The Impact of Privatization and Competition in the Telecommunications Sector around the World

Abstract: Abstract. Using a comprehensive country-level panel data set covering the period from 1981 to 1998, we examine the impact of privatization and competition in the telecommunications sector around the world. Privatization contributed substantially to labor shedding, output growth, network expansion, and improvements in labor productivity as well as total factor productivity. But how countries privatized is important. Share issue privatization facilitated the development of the mobile market segment. Granting a ... Show more

Maicas,2011-12-16 Recent Developments in Mobile Communications A Multidisciplinary Approach offers a multidisciplinary perspective on the mobile telecommunications industry The aim of the chapters is to offer both comprehensive and up to date surveys of recent developments and the state of the art of various economical and technical aspects of mobile telecommunications markets The economy oriented section offers a variety of chapters dealing with different topics within the field An overview is given on the effects of privatization on mobile service providers performance application of the LAM model to market segmentation the details of WAC the current state of the telecommunication market a potential framework for the analysis of the composition of both ecosystems and value networks using tussles and control points the return of quality investments applied to the mobile telecommunications industry the current state in the networks effects literature The other section of the book approaches the field from the technical side Some of the topics dealt with are antenna parameters for mobile communication systems emerging wireless technologies that can be employed in RVC communication ad hoc networks in mobile communications DoA based Switching DoAS Coordinated MultiPoint transmission and reception CoMP conventional and unconventional CACs and water quality dynamic monitoring systems based on web server embedded technology

The Privatisation of European Telecommunications Johan From,Kjell A. Eliassen,2017-11-28 This international volume presents a comprehensive comparative study of the transformation of the European telecommunications industry from 1990 to the present The book focuses on the old incumbent operators and their dramatic change from state agencies to listed companies It analyzes the liberalization process as well as the corporatization and privatization of these companies The contributors assess the conditions for the transformations taking place the driving forces for change the effects to management the efforts of the EU during these processes and ultimately the role of the private owner Political science publications have all but excluded analysis of the newly privatized companies their contribution to the liberalization process both before and after privatization and the interplay between the national political and company levels The book redresses this shortcoming and also features a double empirical focus in that the main national incumbents in Europe are analyzed and compared to Telenor the Norwegian former incumbent The Impact of Privatization and Competition in the Telecommunications Sector Around the World Wei Li, Lixin Colin Xu, 2004 Using a comprehensive country level panel data set covering the period from 1981 to 1998 we examine the impact of privatization and competition in the telecommunications sector around the world Privatization contributed substantially to labor shedding output growth network expansion and improvements in labor productivity as well as total factor productivity But how countries privatized is important On the one hand share issue privatization facilitated the development of the mobile market segment Granting a newly privatized operator a period of exclusive market access on the other hand reduced the gains from privatization owing to the output restricting tendency associated with market power but did not entirely negate them The presence of competitive pressure in the market was associated with more employment higher output faster network expansion and higher labor and total factor productivity We find evidence of complementarity between privatization and competition in that competition increased the gains from privatization and vice versa Our estimates show that half of the output growth between 1990 and 1998 was attributable to privatization and competition after controlling for input growth Competition appeared to have a larger impact on labor and total factor productivity than did privatization The Political Economy of Telecommunications Privatization in Sub-Saharan Africa Olubunmi Ibikunle Folayan, 1999 Telecommunications performance, reforms, and governance , Global Electronic Commerce Catherine L. telecommunications privatization and lessons from more developed nations completes the historical background necessary to frame the remaining topics An examination of recent developments shows how the pressure for reform is mounting notably because of technological advancements and the increasingly competitive telecommunications global marketplace The primary focus of the paper is on identifying policies and practices that will maximize the gains from divestiture Telefonos de Mexico and Compa a de Telecomunicaciones de Chile are examined in a comparative analysis of the privatization processes and results in Mexico and Chile An examination of research results includes a discussion of socioeconomic issues and their implications followed by a discussion of policy issues and their implications The paper ends with a discussion of research limitations and suggestions for further research
