Prefabrication With Concrete:

Prefabrication with Concrete A.S.G. Bruggeling, G.F. Huyghe, 1991-01-01 Both authors are innovators of the prefabrication of concrete structures an important advance towards industrialization of the building process The detailing of connections between the factory produced elements is crucial and the strut and tie models presented here can be directly applied in str

Prefabricated Concrete Components for Low-cost Housing Construction, 1963 Prefabricated Systems Ulrich Knaack, Sharon Chung-Klatte, Reinhard Hasselbach, 2012-12-13 For a number of years modular construction the use of prefabricated elements in architecture has once again become a subject of lively discussion and debate Long written off as monotonous today s building components are actually highly differentiated and capable of supporting and enhancing the architect s creativity Numerous structures work with prefabricated components for single family homes the figure is ninety eight percent and modular systems are available that meet high aesthetic standards This book provides an overview of the various different systems and their possible uses particularly in the areas of housing office and industrial buildings It explains the processes and components of modular construction and the behavior of the various materials when this construction approach is used The authors offer strategies for planning and designing with prefabricated systems so that the architect can use them productively Numerous drawings explain the principles of modular construction while built examples forge a link between those principles and the practical activity of building

Prefabrication and New Building Technique, 1963 Prefabricated Concrete Components for Low-cost Housing Construction United States. Housing and Home Finance Agency. Office of International Housing, 1963 Prefabrication R. B. White, Building Research Station (Great Britain), 1965 Prefabrication and New Building, 1955 Catalogue of Prefabricated Elements Maritime Navigation Commission. Working Group 36, 2005 Prefabricated Construction for Sustainability and Mass Customization, 2024-03-13 Building is a system of energy and environment which needs to accommodate diverse needs and demands at individual and societal levels Nearly 40% of global energy use derives from construction In fact a house consumes a significant amount of energy before and after occupancy and the associated CO2 emissions are contributing to climate change Prefabrication is a means to mass produce buildings or parts and components Thus in theory production costs can be reduced through economies of scale In the 1920s the significance of mass produced houses was widely propagated by Le Corbusier who saw standardization as fundamental to mass production Nonetheless today in response to growing global warming issues and the constant increase in energy prices the construction industry is becoming more responsive to the delivery of sustainable architecture than ever Within this context sustainability may embrace not only building economy but also the adequacy beyond the legitimacy in which the quality barely coincides with individuals various dynamic needs desires and expectations today In this respect mass produced prefabs alone fail to realize total sustainability In 1987 a paradoxical concept of mass customization was introduced by Stanley Davis Nonetheless the idea applied to housing dates back to the

1950s The essence of mass customizable architecture was speculated by Walter Gropius as he emphasized the need for standardizing and mass producing not only entire buildings but also their components The combination of standard building components which can be prefabricated results in mass producing various types of constructions through economies of scope where the quality can be defined by user choices of the components given in consideration of economic constraints and needs and demands This book is an initial attempt to integrate the two notions of sustainability and mass customization by reviewing the potential capacities of prefabricated construction
