highlight the various ways in which sport norms policies practices and representations pervasively interface with gender and other socially constructed categories of difference They argue that sport is not only a site of competition and physical recreation but also a crossroad where features of modern society such as hegemony identities democracy technology development and master statuses intertwine and bifurcate As they point out in many ways sport production reproduction distribution and consumption are relational spatial and contextual and therefore do not pay off for men women and other social groups equally The authors draw attention to the structure and scope of efforts needed to transform the exclusionary and gendered nature of sport processes to make them adequate to the task of engendering Africa's development Gender Sport and Development in Africa is an immensely important contribution to current debates on the broader impacts of sport on society It is an essential reading for students policy makers and others interested in perspectives that interrogate the grand narratives of sport as a neutral instrument of development in African countries Practical Principles of

Introductions to each section provide students with the rationale for student appreciation of ethics, an orientation to each chapter, and an understanding of each chapter's contribution to the field. Early chapters on conceptualizations of persuasion, the history of the field, and theoretical developments give students the background necessary for understanding what persuasion is and how it functions. Chapters on both theories of persuasion and the practice of persuasion in multiple contexts help students see the connection between theory and practice. Concrete examples of theories and concepts bring the text to life and help students more easily understand the material.
