CHEM-114

Course: Chem-114

Quantitative Inorganic Analysis (Credit: 3 hours / week).

PURPOSE OF CHEM -114

The main purpose of this course is to develop the basic knowledge of a student dealing with chemical reagents. The student will learn how to handle equipments (basic to every research laboratory). The student will also learn techniques, how to determine the amount of a substance quantitatively. The teacher will deliver some lectures to develop the fundamental knowledge of the students regarding the techniques of performing the experiments. The skill of the students will be developed on the basis of the following topics.

- Elementary concepts of quantitative analysis.
- Chemical composition of solutions: Weights and concentration units, stoichiometric relations, problems related to these concepts.
- Introduction to volumetric analysis: fundamental definitions, titration curves of acid-base and oxidation - reduction reactions, volumetric calculations.
- Techniques and tools of volumetric analysis.
- Primary standard and Secondary standard substances.
- Evaluation of analytical data.

ADVICE TO THE STUDENTS:

Chemistry laboratory is a place where seriousness is very much essential. Any time a serious accident may happen due to carelessness of the student. If there is an accident it will never be reversible. Student will not get a second chance to recover it. Understanding of what to do, will serve well in minimizing the danger for the student. Advance preparation for the sessional class is very much important. To get good result in the sessional course several things a student should do.

Firstly, student should understand this Laboratory manual clearly and how to use it effectively. It is his duty to learn it carefully.

Secondly, he must try to understand both the purpose and the principle behind each of the experiment he will do.

Thirdly, he will organize his time effectively in advance of each experiment. As in the Chemistry Laboratory a student has to work with various hazardous chemicals, he should wear an APRON during his sessional work.

To avoid unnecessary hazards of explosion a student should never pour any reagent back into a stock solution bottle. If you do this then a student may introduce impurities which could spoil the experiment for the person using the stock reagent after him. So pouring things back into bottle is not only a dangerous practice but also inconsidered.

A student should not undertake any unauthorized experiment. The chance of an accident are high particularly with an experiment which has not been completely checked to reduce the hazard. Because a chemistry laboratory course deals with flammable solvent at all times the danger of fire is always present. Because of this danger DO NOT PUT INFLAMED STICK OF MATCHES HERE AND THERE. SMOKING IN THE LABORATORY IS STRICTLY PROHIBITED.
