Polar Bear Strategy Reflections On Risk In Modern Life:

The Polar Bear Strategy John Ross, 1999-04-22 From cholesterol to cancer asteroids to AIDS we face more risks than our grandparents ever dreamed of But most of us are 200 years behind the curve when it comes to making intelligent risk based decisions. We refuse to fly but don't wear seat belts in our far more dangerous cars. We panic about toxic waste dumps but collectively smoke a billion cigarettes a year In this entertaining and enlightening look at risk in the modern age John Ross argues that the burgeoning science of risk assessment has given us powerful new tools to cope in a complex world if we could only learn how to speak the language Ross examines the building blocks of this new language and helps us identify and relinquish long held often pre set biological and psychological responses to risk Through vivid stories and compelling science Ross empowers us to take control of our lives and to exercise our most basic democratic freedom the power to make our own decisions both as individuals and as a society How to Live Dangerously Warwick Cairns, 2011-07-06 We live in a society governed by Fear Packets of peanuts may contain nuts our children are locked away safe indoors and we are encouraged to fear risks that previous generations took for granted The result is a temptation never to leave the house How to Live Dangerously is a sane straight talking wonderfully entertaining manifesto that assesses the real risks of modern day life and encourages us to embrace a new freedom in the way we live Sometimes sh1t happens but you may as well get out there and enjoy yourself while you can because in the end you re a long time dead Don t like your children much You d have to lock them out of the house every day for 186 000 years before they were abducted and even then you d get them back within 24 hours Afraid of flying If you really want to die in a plane crash you ll need to take a flight a day for the next 26 000 years
