Media Education in Action Alberto Parola, Maria Ranieri, 2010 Media Education ME has come a long way Today it can no longer be considered a field of study reserved for semiotic and communication researchers Nor can it be regarded as a privileged practice of those teachers who for some reason consider media of fundamental importance On one hand ME is now part of the agenda of international organizations which consider the development of media competences a necessary requisite to fully exercise citizenship in the current contemporary society On the other ME practices are becoming increasingly widespread in schools involving a growing number of teachers Notwithstanding teaching the media still seems to be a rather solipsistic task where everything is fine Indeed in ME there is a tremendous lack of research concerning the educational practices quality and effectiveness This book tries to cope with these issues by providing a set of instruments to design develop and evaluate ME activities in schools and supporting the enhancement of media educators knowledge and skills

Education Policy and Social Reproduction John Fitz, Brian Davies, John Evans, 2005-11-16 This book takes a theoretically informed look at British education policy over the last sixty years when secondary schooling for all children became an established fact for the first time Comprehensive schools largely replaced a system based on academic selection. Now under choice and competition policies all schools are subject to the rigours of local education markets. What impact did each of these successive policy frameworks have on structures of opportunities for families and their children? How and to what extent was the experience of secondary school students shaped and what influenced the qualifications they obtained and their life chances after schooling? The authors locate their work within two broad strands in the sociology of education. Basil Bernstein's work on the realisation of power and control in and through pedagogic discourse and social reproduction provides a theoretical framework for exploring the character of and continuities and change in education and training policies. The book is an important contribution to debates about the extent to which education is a force for change in class divided societies. The authors also set out to re-establish social class at the centre of educational analysis at a time when emphasis has been on identity and identity formation, arguing for their interdependence. This book will be an important resource for students, policy analysts and policymakers wishing to think through and understand the longer term impact of programmes that have shaped secondary schooling in Britain and elsewhere.

Education in Spite of Policy Robin Alexander, 2021-12-30

A national system of education cannot function without policy. But the path to practice is seldom smooth, especially when ideology overrides evidence or when ministers seek to micromanage what is best left to teachers. And once the media join the fray the mixture becomes downright combustible. Drawing on his long experience as teacher, researcher, government adviser, campaigner and international consultant, and on over 600 published sources, Robin Alexander expertly illustrates and illuminates these processes. This selection from his recent writing, some hitherto unpublished, opens windows onto cases and issues that concern every teacher.

Part 1 tackles system level reform. It revisits the Cambridge Primary Review, an evidence rich enquiry into the condition and future of primary education in England which challenged the UK government's policies on curriculum, testing, standards and more besides. Here the reform narratives and strategies of successive governments are confronted and dissected. Part 2 follows the development of England's current National Curriculum, exposing its narrow vision and questionable use of evidence, and offering a more generous, aims driven alternative. This section also investigates the expertise and leadership needed if children are to experience a curriculum of the highest quality in all its aspects. Part 3 reaches the heart of the matter: securing the place in effective pedagogy of well founded classroom talk, a mission repeatedly frustrated by political intervention. The centrepiece is dialogic teaching, a proven tool for advancing students' speaking, thinking, learning and arguing, and an essential response to the corrosion of democracy and the nihilism of post truth. Part 4 goes global. It investigates governments' PISA fuelled flirtations with what they think can be adapted or copied from education elsewhere, examines the benefits and pitfalls of international comparison, and ends with the ultimate policy initiative: the United Nations mission to ensure inclusive and equitable quality education for all the world's children.
