Policy Based Lending And Poverty Reduction:

Policy-based Lending and Poverty Reduction Richard Bolt, Manabu Fujimura, 2002 With reference to Asia World Bank and Poverty Alleviation United States. Congress. House. Select Committee on Hunger, 1990 Poverty Reduction Support Credits World Bank, 2010-05-21 This evaluation examines the relevance and effectiveness of Poverty Reduction Support Credits PRSCs introduced by the Bank in early 2001 to support comprehensive growth improve social conditions and reduce poverty in IDA countries PRSCs were intended to allow greater country ownership provide more predictable annual support exhibit more flexible conditionality and strengthen budget processes in a results based framework By September 2009 the Bank had approved 99 PRSCs totaling some 7.5 billion and representing 38% percent of IDA policy based lending The evaluation finds that in terms of process PRSCs were effective in easing conditionality increasing country ownership and aid predictability stimulating dialogue between central and sectoral ministries and improving donor harmonization In terms of content PRSCs succeeded in emphasizing public sector management and pro poor service delivery Yet in terms of results it is difficult to distinguish growth and poverty outcomes in countries with PRSCs from other better performing IDA countries There is scope for further simplifying the language of conditionality and underpinning PRSCs with better pro poor growth diagnostics PRSCs can also strengthen their results frameworks and limit sector policy content in multi sector DPLs to high level or cross cutting issues Today Bank policy has subsumed PRSCs under the broader mantle of Development Policy Lending and the rationale for a separate brand name although differences linger from the past Since PRSCs and other policy based lending have gradually converged in design remaining differences compared to other Development Policy Loans should be clearly spelled out or the separate PRSC brand name should be phased out Linking Emissions Trading Schemes ,

Poverty Reduction Handbook World Bank, 1993 The Political Economy of Good Governance for Poverty Alleviation Policies Narayan Lakshman, 2003 The motivation of this research paper is to shed light upon the political economy factors that determine the quality of governance for poverty alleviation policies This issue is a crucial one because although remarkable strides have been made in some parts of the world more than 2.8 billion people live on less than $2 a day The situation begs the important question Why have poverty alleviation efforts by developing countries not achieved the momentum necessary to improve the living standards of poor An important reason why growth with significant redistribution has not occurred in many developing countries is that poverty reduction strategies have often been politically naive The literature spawned by major development institutions until the 1980s did not go beyond policy prescriptions to ask under what political conditions redistributive policies could be successfully adopted This is a relevant issue because policies reflect concrete political and social interests and it is not hard to imagine a situation where poverty alleviating reform is hindered by vested interests The aim of this research paper is to shed light upon the factors determining quality of governance because poor governance is but a manifestation of these deep rooted institutional and political biases against the collective interests of the poor

Economic Growth and Development in Africa Horman Chitonge, 2015-01-09 In recent years Africa has undergone the longest period of sustained economic growth in the continent's history drawing the attention of the international media and academics alike This book analyses the Africa Rising narrative from multidisciplinary perspectives offering a critical assessment of the explanations given for the poor economic growth and development performance in Africa prior to the millennium and the dramatic shift towards the new Africa Bringing in perspectives from African intellectuals and scholars many of whom have previously been overlooked in this debate the book examines the construction of Africa's economic growth and development portraits over the years It looks at two institutions that play a vital role in African development providing a detailed explanation of how the World Bank and the IMF have interpreted and dealt with the African challenges and experiences The insightful analysis reveals that if Africa is rising only 20-30 per cent of Africans are aboard the rising ship and the main challenge facing the continent today is to bring on board the majority of Africans who have been excluded from growth This book makes the complex and sometimes confusing debates on Africa's economic growth experience more accessible to a wide range of readers interested in the Africa story It is essential reading for students and researchers in African Studies and will be of great interest to scholars in Development Studies Political Economy and Development Economics

The European Social Model Assar Lindbeck, 2002 Electricity Demand in the People's Republic of China Bo Qiang Lin, 2003 This paper uses a macroeconomic approach to develop a long run electricity demand model to analyze the main factors affecting electricity demand in the People's Republic of China PRC As expected the relationship among variables is more stable and significant after the PRC's economic reforms 1978 when all factors were more responsive to market forces An error correction model provides an appropriate framework for forecasting the short run fluctuations in aggregate electricity demand The demand elasticity of gross domestic product GDP is estimated at about 0.8 after the 1978 economic reforms lower than that of the pre reform period before 1978 The results show that although GDP is still the most important factor for electricity demand electricity demand is negatively related to structural changes and efficiency improvement This implies that in a fast growing economy such as the PRC high GDP growth does not always come with high electricity demand and explains why in 1998 when the PRC had an economic growth rate of 7.8 percent electricity consumption grew by only 2.8 percent To meet the forecasted demand growth the total install capacity incremental is estimated to be 187 GW between 2002-2010 while the required investment costs are estimated to be US 193 billion in 2002 prices The continued growth of coal fired power plants will increase the share of the power sector in total sulfur dioxide emission from 50 percent in 2001 to 53 percent in 2005
