Heidenheimer, 1966 Having achieved solid marks during an adolescent testing period having proved capable of eclipsing the faulty patterns of earlier generations so the argument goes the West German political system should now be treated as a fully mature and democratic one Thus President Luebke has argued that the German postwar period be officially considered as having been concluded This book should help the reader decide whether German institutions ought now to be accepted as much on face value as those of other democratic Western systems As regards progress toward German unification however very little has occurred during the five year period Considered as both societies and political systems West and East Germany are still very much the hostile twins they were in 1961 when the Berlin wall was built Preface Institutional Design of Democracy in the Federal Republic of Germany Görkem Ercan, 2013-06-27 Essay from the year 2011 in the subject Politics Political Systems Germany Jacobs University Bremen gGmbH FY course German Politics and Culture language English abstract In 1949 the Basic Law was written in Germany in order to keep certain aspects according to certain rules This literature review examines certain historical events and defines which instruments exist in the Basic Law to prevent those historical events from happening again Furthermore it includes constitutional norms which then are applied to Liphart s 1999 question of whether the Consensus Model of Democracy or the Westminster Model of Democracy is better The paper then discusses pros and cons of the mentioned models that are mentioned and concludes with a decision towards one of the two Government by Constitution: the Political Systems of Democracy Herbert J.
