Crafting Transnational Policing Andrew Goldsmith,James Sheptycki,2007-11-16 The book examines the phenomenon of crafting transnational policing By this term is meant the different forms of engagement in policing reform by international donors national governments foreign police and law enforcement agencies in the domestic policing agencies and programs of recipient countries It includes inter alia peace keeping in post conflict situations reconstruction and capacity building as part of nation or state building exercises and the provision of technical assistance in relation to certain aspects of law enforcement In each instance there is a cross border provision of resources with a view to shaping the kind of policing provided in recipient nations Why do some countries engage in these activities Why has policing become a preferred form of foreign policy engagement in some countries What forms of policing development are provided How are they delivered And how are they received How should these kinds of assistance and or interventions be conducted in future In this regard is there a non negotiable core of good policing that needs to be developed and nurtured as an integral part of all defensible transnational policing engagements These are some of the questions raised by the contributions to this book The book arises primarily from papers presented at a workshop held in Onati Spain in July 2004 on the emergence of a global constabulary ethic The book has also been supplemented by two solicited chapters Crime & Justice International ,2003 Transforming Police in Central and Eastern Europe Marina Caparini,2004 The issue of police reform in countries in transition from state socialism toward more democratic forms of governance has risen to practical prominence in recent years The collapse of the Soviet Union initiated fundamental changes in aspirations ideologies and governing practices among former members of the socialist camp Reforming policing systems which had served primarily to protect the party states from their opponents into systems which serve and protect civic society has come to be seen as an essential prerequisite and concomitant of the democratisation process in transitional countries The chapters in this book describe what has happened to the policing systems in 14 countries in Central and eastern Europe what reforms in ideology organisation policies and practices have been undertaken what has changed in the way policing is done and assessment of whether the policing system has moved closer toward democratic policing In combining descriptions of reforms and assessments of whether reforms have moved policing systems toward more democratic forms the book provides a comparative overview of what has been achieved since 1989 and what has been learned so far about how to reform policing systems along democratic lines Such lessons offer insights for further reform in transitional countries and for Western democracies as well and we hope will stimulate more theoretical discussions of the nature and dynamics of policing systems state society relations and the role of processes of democratisation of policing systems In Search of Security Law Commission of Canada,2006 Comparative and International Criminal Justice Charles B.
