Radon Bernard Leonard Cohen, Drew Nelson, 1987      Tracks to Innovation Robert L. Fleischer, 2012-12-06 A serendipitous discovery in nuclear physics has led to a useful tool in materials science In the late 1950s scientists at General Electric among them the author discovered that when mica is exposed to energetic charged particles such as are emitted in radioactive decay or occur in cosmic rays the particles leave latent tracks in the material When such a material is chemically etched the tracks are revealed as narrow deep pits whose size and shape is determined both by the particle that made the track and by the technique used in etching It soon turned out that glass plastics or certain other materials can be similarly treated This discovery paved the way not only for a new and useful method of measuring radioactivity it has also found widespread applications in other fields ranging from geology and materials science to archaeology and art history Thus for example naturally produced tracks can be used to estimate the age of a mineral deposit or an archaeological material and deliberately produced tracks can be used to make extremely fine filters Fleischer presents the history of these developments and discusses the applications of the technique in a way that will be interesting to anyone with a minimal knowledge of physics      The Sierra Club Green Guide Andrew J.
