Including both technical and clinical aspects, it provides a foundation of essential knowledge common to practitioners from any background. This title covers radiation physics, biology and protection and addresses all areas of imaging including the design and operation of the gamma camera, including solid state cameras, single photon emission computed tomography (SPECT) acquisition and processing and image interpretation and writing of reports. Stress testing and radiopharmaceuticals are explained in detail as is the evidence base underpinning myocardial perfusion scintigraphy. Newer radionuclide imaging techniques are well covered, e.g. phosphate scintigraphy in cardiac amyloidosis as is the expanding field of cardiac positron emission tomography (PET). Fully updated with coverage of new indications for gamma camera imaging, increased focus on attenuation correction and SPECT/CT and detail on the design, use and clinical implications of solid state gamma cameras throughout this second edition of the essential text for nuclear cardiology trainees and practitioners is fully illustrated with colour plates to aid clinical practice Presented in the bestselling Oxford Specialist Handbook format Nuclear Cardiology provides core knowledge for those training in the subspecialty whether at a basic or advanced level or from a medical or technical background and is a key resource for those seeking to accredit in the subspecialty

Horowitz, Hermann W. Eichstaedt, 1985 Nuclear Cardiology: The Basics Frans J. Th. Wackers, Wendy Bruni, Barry Zaret, 2003-09-11 In the United States the performance of nuclear cardiology studies continues to increase As an example in 1998 4 160 739 myocardial perfusion imaging studies were done In 2001 this number increased to 5 679 258 The nonhospital performance of perfusion imaging increased over the same time period from 1 188 731 to 1 789 207 studies Arlington Medical Resources data In 1999 there were approximately 1300 nonhospital sites with nuclear imaging capabilities of which 600 were in physicians offices By 2001 there were approximately 1700 nonhospital sites of which 780 were in physicians offices from IMV LTD <http://www.imvlimited.com> mid The growth of nuclear cardiology as an expanded outpatient laboratory enterprise is readily apparent In the United States as well as in other parts of the world this growth has been linked to the recognition of the ability of cardiologists to perform these studies The certification examination in nuclear cardiology is now well established in the United States Accreditation of laboratories is also well established Over the years some of the most frequent questions asked by our former trainees relate to practical issues involved in the establishment of a nuclear cardiology laboratory In view of the growth of the field this is certainly not surprising Learning Cardiac Imaging Ramón Ribes, Paola Kuschnir, Antonio Luna, Joan C. Vilanova, José Manuel Jimenez-Hoyuela, 2010-03-02 After the publication of Learning Diagnostic Imaging which was an introductory teaching text to the ten radiological subspecialties included in the American Boards of Radiology we began to write a series of teaching texts on each radiological subspecialty If the first book of the series was mainly aimed at residents and provided them with an introductory tool to the study of radiology the subsequent volumes of the series try to provide the reader with an introduction to the study of each radiological subspecialty In Learning Cardiac Imaging we intend to review cardiac imaging from the perspective of the six imaging modalities usually performed to obtain anatomic and functional information of the heart In old days conventional radiographs gave us some information about the anatomy and only secondarily the pathophysiology of the heart With the advent of echocardiography the heart could be studied dynamically Nuclear Medicine and Cardiac MR allowed the study of cardiac function 32 and 64 detector multislice CT let us obtain images of the coronary tree in a noninvasive approach Cardiac imaging is complex and many health care professionals are needed firstly in the obtention and secondly in the interpretation of the images Not only radiologists cardiologists and nuclear medicine physicians are needed specialized nurses and technicians are indispensable to obtain diagnostic images of such a dynamic anatomic structure as the heart The authorship of the book reflects its multidisciplinary approach of the book Nuclear Cardiology and Correlative Imaging Joao V.
