Elderly Patients and Family Members Satisfaction with Discharge Planning Veronica Gillette, 2003-02-17 Facilitating the transition of elderly patients from the hospital setting to their pre hospital environment is a major challenge for health care providers Adequate discharge planning has been mandated by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Health Care Organization JCAHO and the American Hospital Association AHA However reports from the literature indicate that some elderly patients on Medicare may be discharged quicker and sicker than in the past and that care giving family members are often not included in the discharge planning process The problem is that elderly patients may be discharged from the hospital before appropriate discharge planning is complete The purpose of this pilot study was to determine elderly patients and their family members level of satisfaction and perceptions with the overall quality of hospital discharge planning The study addressed the following questions 1 What is the level of satisfaction reported by the elderly patient and the family member regarding discharge planning 2 What are the perceptions of the elderly patient and family member with the overall quality of discharge planning A descriptive telephone survey design was used to determine elderly patients and family members satisfaction with hospital discharge planning A telephone questionnaire was administered to a convenience sample of ten patients and ten family members between five to ten days after the patient was discharged from the hospital The questionnaire consisted of closed ended and open ended questions Demographic and closed ended questions were analyzed using descriptive statistics while open ended questions were group and summarized Satisfaction ratings were measured on a ten point scale with ten indicating the highest satisfaction Findings of this pilot study indicated that elderly patients and their family members were satisfied with discharge planning and that nurses were often considered the most helpful in the discharge process Average overall patient satisfaction was 9.6 and average family member satisfaction was 8.9 Areas receiving the highest satisfaction ratings included patients being involved in their discharge planning and instructions regarding medications obtaining equipment and supplies and wound care Areas in need of improvement were identified as involving both patient and family member in the process addressing activity level inquiring about financial concerns and the possible need for additional help at home and providing instructions about caring for the patient in the home environment Limitations of the pilot study as well as implications for nursing practice and education are described Recommendations for future research are discussed Elderly Patients Kenneth Hazell,1962 Surgical Intensive Care Medicine John M. O'Donnell,Flávio E. Nácul,2009-11-18 We are honored to present the second edition of Surgical Intensive Care Medicine Our first edition was considered to be an important contribution to the critical care literature and received excellent reviews from Critical Care Medicine Chest and Anesthesiology In the second edition the basic organization of the book remains unchanged being composed of 60 carefully selected chapters divided into 11 sections The book begins with general topics in primary intensive care such as airway management and vascular cannulation followed by categories based on medical and surgical subspecialties While the chapters discuss definitions pathophysiology clinical course complications and prognosis the primary emphasis is devoted to patient management The contents of the current edition have been comprehensively upgraded and the chapters retained from the first edition have been thoroughly updated revised or rewritten In this second edition some new topics have been added including Postoperative Care of the Obese Patient Postoperative Care of the Pancreas Transplant Patient Optimization of High Risk Surgical Patients Post operative Alcohol Withdrawal Syndrome Ethics and End of Life Issues Improving the ICU and Continuous Medical Education in Intensive Care Medicine We are extremely fortunate to have high quality contributors many of whom are nationally and internationally recognized researchers speakers and practitioners in Critical Care Medicine An important feature of this latest edition is the geographical diversity of its authors Most are based in the United States but colleagues from Canada England Ireland Germany Belgium Holland France Italy Portugal and Australia have also made notable contributions The Elderly Patient Bernard A.
