Prehistoric Roman And Postroman Landscapes Of The Great Ouse Valley Cba Research Report:

Prehistoric, Roman, and Post-Roman Landscapes of the Great Ouse Valley M. Dawson, 2000 The valley of the Great Ouse in Bedfordshire is an area of rich but diminishing archaeological resources This volume draws together for the first time current archaeological work in the area in an attempt to characterise the region's distinct but previously unrecognised archaeological identity With synthetic surveys of specific landscape areas and short case studies it effectively captures the character of the region's archaeology whilst highlighting both areas of theoretical concern in understanding the region's past and areas of methodological concern in developing effective ways of exploring that past within the constraints of current archaeological practice At a time when the formulation of research frameworks is increasingly seen as an important element in shaping the direction of future archaeological work this volume will provide the framework for defining future research

Mapping Doggerland: The Mesolithic Landscapes of the Southern North Sea Vincent Gaffney, Kenneth Thomson, Simon Fitch, 2007-12-12 Mapping Doggerland documents the methodology and results of an innovative project to investigate a large area of the Southern North Sea submerged during the last Glacial Maximum between 10 000 and 7500 bp

Kingdom, Civitas, and County Stephen Rippon, 2018-04-19 This book explores the development of territorial identity in the late prehistoric Roman and early medieval periods Over the course of the Iron Age a series of marked regional variations in material culture and landscape character emerged across eastern England that reflect the development of discrete zones of social and economic interaction The boundaries between these zones appear to have run through sparsely settled areas of the landscape on high ground and corresponded to a series of kingdoms that emerged during the Late Iron Age In eastern England at least these pre Roman socio economic territories appear to have survived throughout the Roman period despite a trend towards cultural homogenization brought about by Romanization Although there is no direct evidence for the relationship between these socio economic zones and the Roman administrative territories known as civitates they probably corresponded very closely The fifth century saw some Anglo Saxon immigration but whereas in East Anglia these communities spread out across much of the landscape in the Northern Thames Basin they appear to have been restricted to certain coastal and estuarine districts The remaining areas continued to be occupied by a substantial native British population including much of the East Saxon kingdom very little of which appears to have been Saxon By the sixth century a series of regionally distinct identities that can be regarded as separate ethnic groups had developed which corresponded very closely to those that had emerged during the late prehistoric and Roman periods These ancient regional identities survived through to the Viking incursions whereafter they were swept away following the English reconquest and replaced with the counties with which we are familiar today

Moving on in Neolithic Studies Jim Leary, Thomas Kador, 2016-02-29 Mobility is a fundamental facet of being human and should be central to archaeology Yet mobility itself and the role it plays in the production of social life is rarely considered as a subject in its own right This is particularly so with discussions of the Neolithic people where mobility is often framed as being somewhere between a sedentary existence and nomadic movements This latest collection of papers from the Neolithic Studies Group seminars examines the importance and complexities of movement and mobility whether on land or water in the Neolithic period It uses movement in its widest sense ranging from everyday mobilities the routines and rhythms of daily life to proscribed mobility such as movement in and around monuments and occasional and large scale movements and migrations around the continent and across seas Papers are roughly grouped and focus on mobility and the landscape monuments and mobility travelling by water and materials and mobility Through these themes the volume considers the movement of people ideas animals objects and information and uses a wide range of archaeological evidence from isotope analysis artefact studies lithic scatters and assemblage diversity

Middle Saxon' Settlement and Society: The Changing Rural Communities of Central and Eastern England

Duncan Wright, 2015-05-31 This book explores the experiences of rural communities who lived between the seventh and ninth centuries in central and eastern England Combining archaeology with documentary place name and topographic evidences it provides unique insight into social economic and political conditions in Middle Saxon England Proceedings of the Cambridge Antiquarian Society Cambridge Antiquarian Society (Cambridge, England), 2005 Proceedings of the Cambridge Antiquarian Society, with Communications Made to the Society Cambridge Antiquarian Society (Cambridge, England), 2004

Medieval Villages in an English Landscape Richard Jones, Mark Page, 2006 The village one of the keystones of the English rural landscape has a powerful hold on the imagination This book is the result of the Whittlewood project addresses a key problem for historians the origin of nucleated dispersed settlements It is useful for scholars students enthusiasts of English landscape history

Land, Power and Prestige David Thomas Yates, 2007 A major phase of economic expansion occurred in southern England during the second and early first millennium BC accompanied by a fundamental shift in regional power and wealth towards the eastern lowlands This book offers a synthesis of available data on Bronze Age lowland field systems in England including a gazetteer of sites The research demonstrates the importance of large scale animal husbandry in the mixed farming regimes as evidenced in the design of the field systems which incorporate droveways stock proof fencing watering holes cow pens sheep races and gateways for stockhandling It is argued that the field systems represented a form of conspicuous production an intensification of agrarian endeavour or a statement of intent to be understood in relation to the maintenance display and promotion of hierarchical social systems involved in exchange with their counterparts across the English Channel

Archaeology in the Bedford Region Michael Dawson, Michael J. Allen, 2004 Bedfordshire Archaeology Monograph Series No 4 This volume on the archaeology of the English county of Bedford and its environs brings together the results of five excavations over a four year period in the late 1980s and early 1990s It includes settlement sites dating to the Iron Age and Roman period cemeteries and craftwork centres One of the cemeteries Kempston includes a significant proportion of decapitations from the Roman period and there is a detailed analysis of this phenomena At the same site burial from the 6th century AD hints at some form of continuous settlement in the area Kempston is also interesting for the possibility that it is a planned rural settlement dating to the earliest years of the Roman province This volume also includes the largest finds and ceramics assemblages presently published in the county and is an essential database of artefactual material for any future work It also contains full accounts of several pollen columns taken at Ruxox and Kempston and provides a commentary on the environmental history of the region from the late post glacial The additional data on palaeo environmental evidence from the sites provides a detailed insight into the affect of the environment on later prehistoric communities and the means by which these communities changed and adapted the environment In a small way the Archaeology of the Bedford Region continues the debate into the role of human agency in change and adaptation to events at a local level moreover rather than seeing the archaeology of the region as series of dated phases it presents both qualitatively and where appropriately quantatively the almost continuous changes that took place amongst the rural populations of this region during the later prehistoric and Roman periods With major contributions by Michael J Allen Peter Barker Francesca Boghi Anthea Boylston Caroline R Cartwright Brenda Dickinson Holly Duncan Dawn Enright Peter Guest Sheila Hamilton Dyer Terry A Spencer formerly Jackman Ed McSloy Yvonne Parminter Antony F Roberts Charlotte Roberts Rob Scaife Dan Shiel Anna M Slowikowski and Jackie Wells Illustrations by Roy Friendship Taylor Peter Froste Cecily A Marshall Lisa A Padilla and Faith Puetress Past and Present Anwen Cooper, Mark R. Edmonds, 2007 Documenting the results of some ten years of fieldwork this volume explores the prehistoric occupation of a small valley near Broom on the Bedfordshire gravels It traces a biography of the landscape from the later Mesolithic through to the Iron Age a sequence that saw profound changes in the character scale and temporality of occupation Undertaken in advance of gravel extraction the scale of the fieldwork reported here made it possible to track not only the sequence of occupation but also how prehistoric communities encountered appropriated or ignored the archaeology of their time Set against sequences from across southern England this work sheds important light on the relationship between local histories and broader processes and on the complex and geographically varied ways in which the past itself was understood in the past BOOK JACKET

Records of Buckinghamshire, 2007 Spong Hill Catherine Hills, Sam Lucy, 2013 Spong Hill with over 2500 cremations remains the largest early Anglo Saxon cremation cemetery to have been excavated in Britain This volume presents the long awaited chronology and synthesis of the site It gives a detailed overview of the artefactual evidence which includes over 1200 objects of bone antler and ivory Using this information together with programmes of correspondence analysis of the cremation urns and the grave goods a revised phasing and chronology of the site is offered which argues that it is largely fifth century in date The implications of this revised dating for interpretations of the early medieval period in Britain and further afield are explored in full Feasting and Social Complexity in Later Iron Age East Anglia Sarah Ralph, 2007 This study examines feasting and consumption as indicators of social complexity in the Later Iron Age a time of rapid change in settlements material culture and social and political organisation Catalogue of British Official Publications Not Published by HMSO. ,2001 British National Bibliography for Report Literature ,2001 Pits, Settlement and Deposition During the Neolithic and Early Bronze Age in East Anglia Duncan Garrow,2006 The aim of this study is to consider pits from the Neolithic and Early Bronze Age not easily classified in substantial detail to address questions concerning the kinds of practices and places they represent A Woodland Archaeology Christopher Evans,Ian Hodder,2006 Set in the context of Haddenham project s landscape surveys this book covers four sites excavated at Haddenham providing insights into death and ritual in a changing prehistoric environment It includes the internationally renowned Foulmire Fen long barrow with its preserved timber burial chamber and facade Elements of Being Daniela Hofmann,Jessica Mills,Andrew Cochrane,2005 This volume is the product of a Theoretical Archaeology Group TAG conference session held at Lampeter Wales in December 2003 entitled Mentalit s and Identities in Motion Included here are all the papers held there and more besides The session centred on the role of past ways of thinking feeling and acting in social transformation and exploring past worldviews as instead of being relegated to the fictional or anecdotal an integral part of every aspect of human life not just explicit contexts of power struggles and domination but also approachable from the material evidence The contributions are widely spread across space and time ranging from Northern Ireland to Sicily from France to Bulgaria and covering almost every period from the Mesolithic to the Thirty Years War On top of this they are also very different in methodology in the ways they have interpreted the session title and approached their evidence Before rushing headlong into this kaleidoscopic mix then it is worth briefly explaining the rationale behind the session title and the selection and arrangement of papers Neolithic Britain and Ireland Caroline Malone,2001 This is a comprehensive and up to date study of the first farming communities in Britain and Ireland Modern theories and fundamental concepts such as sedentism and food production are investigated and presented through case studies
