The Making of Middle Indonesia Gerry van Klinken, 2014-01-30 What holds Indonesia together A strong leader is the answer most often given This book looks instead at a middle level of society Middle classes in provincial towns around the vast archipelago mediate between the state and society and help to constitute state power Middle Indonesia is a social zone connecting extremes The Making of Middle Indonesia examines the rise of an indigenous middle class in one provincial town far removed from the capital city Spanning the late colonial to early New Order periods it develops an unusual associational notion of political power Soft modalities of power included non elite provincial people in the emerging Indonesian state At the same time growing inequalities produced class tensions that exploded in violence in 1965 1966

The Journal of Developing Areas, 1988

In Search of Middle Indonesia, 2014-01-16 The middle classes of Indonesia's provincial towns are not particularly rich yet nationally influential This book examines them ethnographically Rather than a market friendly liberal middle class it finds a conservative petty bourgeoisie just out of poverty and skilled at politics Please note that Sylvia Tiede's article pp 89 110 will only be available in the print edition of this book 9789004263000

Secondary Cities in Developing Countries Dennis A. Rondinelli, 1983-04-01 Rondinelli investigates a viable alternative to the pattern of swollen capital cities and impoverished countryside in the Third World He outlines the rationale for creating a network of large secondary towns These would provide a locale for industrial development that provides markets and services to rural areas without draining them of people and resources He reports on the demography the dynamics and the social and economic characteristics of secondary cities He discusses the rationale for their use as a way of encouraging geographically equitable development and presents a broad strategy for creating a system of secondary cities

Spontaneous Shelter Carl V. Patton, 1988 Using cross national political economic and environmental comparisons as well as case studies from all parts of the world this volume focuses on the increasing problem of providing shelter in underdeveloped countries The innovative solutions that have been applied To The problem And The prospects For The future Spontaneous Shelter examines the contemporary and emerging issues that face homeless people in the Third World and suggests policy actions that can be taken Providing middle class as well as poverty level examples and considering environmental issues The contributors use case materials photographs and drawings to clarify the policy agenda for basic shelter provision Author note Carl V Patton is Dean of the School of Architecture and Urban Planning at the University of Wisconsin Milwaukee

A World of Giant Cities Mattei Dogan, John D. Kasarda, 1988 This major work will change the way experts look at big cities By defining a new kind of city the region dominating city The Metropolis Era offers a new framework for exploring the problems and future of big cities What makes a city grow or stagnate This two volume work provides a much needed assessment of the factors that influence growth and change Eminent sociologists economists planners historians geographers political scientists demographers and urban scholars from 16 countries contribute to this assessment And The Metropolis Era is the first work of this type to cover third world cities as well as cities of the industrialized nations The Metropolis Era is designed for scholars and students of the multidisciplinary world of urban studies Municipal officials planners and policymakers of large cities will find this book invaluable as they seek ways to improve the quality of their cities life For those who have been waiting a long time for a substantive cross cultural resource in urban studies the wait is over In a two volume series Mattei Dogan and John D Kasarda have presented what surely is the most representative and scholarly collection of articles on world urbanization The first of the two volumes which is being reviewed here focuses on a cross cultural comparison of cities demographically historically politically economically and or administratively The second volume presents descriptions of ten specific cities selected from both the developed and developing worlds The thirteen chapters cover virtually all major urban regions of the world The state of the world urbanization is presented and well documented Each chapter presents its unique account of its region s big city growth and the resulting impacts While I have yet to read the second volume this representative and well chosen collection of papers in Volume I suggests that I will be equally impressed All of the articles in this first volume are easily read by scholar and student alike and all those who read this work will be well informed in the socio cultural changes being generated and sometimes festered by the development of an increasingly global urban political economic system Journal of Developing Societies For those who have been waiting a long time for a substantive cross cultural resource in urban studies the wait is over In a two volume series Mattei Dogan and John D Kasarda have presented what surely is the most representative and scholarly collection of articles on world urbanization Easily read by scholar and student alike and all those who read this work will be well informed in the socio cultural changes being generated and sometimes festered by the development of an increasingly global urban political economic system Journal of Developing Societies A major contribution that both addresses the roles that giant cities play worldwide and provides useful detailed analysis of individual mega cities Both the breadth and depth of analysis are impressive as one would expect from the list of distinguished contributors The Metropolis Era would be of interest to all urban scholars Those with a more applied orientation such as scholars in urban and regional planning and schools of public affairs should also welcome the publication of these volumes W Parker Frisbie University of Texas Austin Libraries supporting programs in urban studies urban planning and comparative urbanization will need these two volumes in their collections One special feature of the second volume is that many of the essays have been prepared by specialists or coauthors who live in and study the cities whose problems they analyze which gives the essays more credibility Choice Needless to say these two volumes will be of universal interest to municipal officials of large cities who daily face the challenge of providing their citizens with services and amenities of incredible breadth and complexity Further they will find a ready audience among scholars and students of urban life And last but not least citizens who live in megalopolises as well as in small urban settlements and who might wish to know how other cities are coping with meeting the ever increasing needs of their ever growing population will find the books a source of stimulating information Planning and Administration The main virtue of this collection and it is an important one is that it substantively represents Third World Asian African and Latin American cities and communist bloc countries in addition to the West Contemporary Sociology Anyone interested in learning about the development of the world's largest cities and regions from an individual and comparative perspective will want to take a look at Dogan and Kasarda's two volume assessment of The Metropolis Era A World of Giant Cities Volume 1 and Mega Cities Volume 2 Cities The best global overview of urbanization available at this time Future Survey In terms of facts and ideas per dollar these volumes are a bargain They offer a substantive information about some of the world's giant cities and provocative suggestions regarding the ways urbanists might profitably think about such places individually and comparatively An international marketplace of ideas about cities and metropolitan areas is long overdue The editors are to be congratulated on a major and pioneering contribution to the development of such a marketplace and for allowing contributions latitude in selecting material appropriate to their cities and their perspectives Journal of Regional Science Well done Brings to the giant cities an abundance of information and reflections which are overall a contribution of great value in understanding urban affairs as well as contemporary social evolution This large work is without a doubt the best of its genre that is found on the market It has been put together well and unites an enormous mass of information and ideas on urban development Revue Francaise de Science Politique translated from the French These are remarkable volumes well organised thoughtful and informative seldom theoretical never boring easy to read and thought provoking Every chapter is somewhat different and has something new to say The ills and strengths of large cities are surveyed and analysed with lucidity this large work is of exceptional value and worth reading carefully Jean Gottmann in Town Planning Review A major contribution to the literature The overall impact of the books is an extremely challenging one they deserve to be read widely Urban Studies achieve s a breakthrough in analyzing and discussing urban problems within a cross cultural worldwide approach of collections of this kind this one is both more ambitious and more successful than most Given the direction in which urbanists and the world s cities are moving this book is helpful for sorting through issues with which we will be dealing more frequently Environment and Planning It is an interesting compilation with very much of value Habitat International given the concentration of information in these two volumes they will be an important source of information for students especially and to a lesser extent for municipal officials They will therefore constitute an important reference work for all types of students of urban life in large cities Canadian Journal of Latin Kasarda writes with authority and interest The individual city studies that comprise volume II are useful surveys of contemporary urban problems The Annals of Regional Science it is welcome to have comparative and up to date material on the common problems of large cities The value of these two volumes lies in collecting together disparate material on these large cities International Journa Review - Fernand Braudel Center for the Study of Economies, Historical Systems, and Civilizations Fernand Braudel Center for the Study of Economies, Historical Systems, and Civilizations,1983 Decentralized Industrialization and Urban Dynamics Veronique Dupont,1995-09-13 This study of a rapidly growing industrial town in India deals with a wide range of issues relating to the processes of urbanization and industrialization Veronique Dupont shows how an ancient textile trade town was converted into an industrialized centre The impact of this expansion is examined to understand the demographic mechanisms of the formation of an urban agglomeration Further topics explored include the structure of the labour market an analysis of the socio economic background and investment strategies of the entrepreneurs and labour migration Finally the author highlights the implications of her research for urban and industrial policy Bibliographie internationale des recensions de la littérature savante ,1974 Choice ,1983 Labour Markets and Migrant Absorption in Small Towns Arie Romein,1995 Also published as a thesis Based in part on research conducted between 1989 and 1992 in Huetar Norte in northern Costa Rica

Urban and Regional Economics P. C. Cheshire,Alan W. Evans,1991 Urban and regional economics in contrast to the rest of economics places great emphasis on distance and location and the importance of spatial relationships Urban economics focuses on the city as a centre of economic activity where productivity is increased through many firms being located close to each other and to decision makers in the public sector But because proximity is important distance within the cities is also important and locations within the city will differ in their economic characteristics At the core of regional economics is the concept of the region as a part of the national economy which has distinct characteristics and which because it is spatially separate develops in a different way to the rest of the economy In turn the trajectory of the national economy is influenced by the economic performance of its regions This major new reference collection prepared by leading authorities in the field presents a blend of classic articles examples of the most recent research and surveys of particular topics It will be an essential source of reference for students instructors and researchers with an interest in urban and regional economics The British National Bibliography Arthur James Wells,1968 Tropical African Development M. B. Gleave,1992 We are at a turning point Technological breakthroughs and crumbling national barriers are pressuring firms to become more efficient and entrepreneurial in order to compete in globalized markets At the same time regulators and activist stakeholders are insisting that firms act more fairly and ethically in their dealings with consumers with employees and towards the environment To meet these contradictory pressures is no simple task Far sighted executives are responding by initiating wrenching revisions of their firms competitive postures internal controls and corporate cultures Turning Points describes in detail how visionary leaders can plan for strategic change and guide their firms through the radical restructurings that such changes entail As author Charles J Fombrun puts it Although much has been written about the act of leadership our firms continue to be managed more like autocracies and fiefdoms than like inspired hotbeds of innovation Today the strategic challenge lies in returning to the operating roots from which firms once derived their competitiveness Achieving vigor will require aggressive redeployments of capital and people to improve timing and differentiation to exploit synergies and to mobilize shared interests both internally with employees and externally with rivals Turning Points shows managers how to become the kinds of transforming leaders the times demand Dr Fombrun discusses ongoing changes at prominent companies like AT convert threats into opportunities break out of obsolete strategic trajectories cultivate competitive distinctiveness exploit latent synergies in corporate portfolios court strategic allies reshape control structures and work environments and mobilize the support of all stakeholders Managers will come away from this book not only with a strong appreciation for how changing environments are likely to affect their firms but also with fresh insights for how to engineer their firms passage through such critical turning points A London Bibliography of the Social Sciences ,1985 Vols 1 4 include material to June 1 1929 Public Administration Series--Bibliography ,1990
