Urbanization Prentice Hall 2005 with L McCarthy and The Geography of the World Economy Routledge 2003 with J Agnew and L McCarthy Steven Pinch is a Professor of Human Geography and Deputy Head of the School of Geography at the University of Southampton His recent research has focused on the relationships between knowledge and competitive advantage in the British motor sport industry and has been published in Environment and Planning Geoforum Journal of Economic Geography and Regional Studies The SAGE Companion to the City Tim Hall, Phil Hubbard, John Rennie Short, 2008-06-05 This reference is a comprehensive study guide to the city The text explains and evaluates the key ideas informed by the latest research adding the necessary historical context to situate the student in the literature and the essential debates Organized in four sections The SAGE Companion to the City provides a systematic A Z to understanding the city that explains the interrelations between society culture and economy Cities and Technology Open University. AT308 Course Team, 1999 City Form, Economics and Culture Pablo Guillen, Urša Komac, 2020-05-30 This is a book about how cities occupy space We are not interested in architectural masterpieces but the tools for reinventing city life We try to provide a framework for the architecture and design of public space without aesthetic considerations We identify several defining factors First of all history as the city today very much depends on how it was yesterday The geographical location and the technology available at a point of time both play a constraining role in what can be done as well Culture in the form of social norms laws and regulations also restricts what is possible to do On the other hand culture is also important in guiding the ideas and aspirations that together inform what society wants the city to be The city needs government intervention or regulation to ameliorate the problem posed by a tangle of externalities and public goods We focus on two comparative case studies the evolution of urban form in the US and how it stands in a sharp contrast with the evolution of urban form in Japan We emphasise the difference in regulations between both jurisdictions We study how differences in technological choices driven by culture i e racial segregation geography i e the availability of land and history i e the mobility restrictions of the Tokugawa period result in vast differences in mobility regarding the share of public transport walking and cycling versus motorised private transport American cities are constrained by rules that are much further from the neoliberal economic idea of free and competitive markets than the Japanese ones Japanese planning promotes competition and through a granular walkable city dotted with small shops fosters variety in the availability of goods and services We hypothesise how changing regulations could change the urban form to generate a greater variety of goods and to foster the access to those goods through a more equitable distribution of wealth Critically we point out that a desirably denser city must rely on public transport and we also study how a less dense city can be made to work with public transport We conclude by claiming that changes in regulations are very unlikely to happen in the US as it would require deep cultural changes to move from local to a more universal and less excluding public good provision but they are both possible and desirable in other jurisdictions
