Pre Industrial England Geographical Essays:

Pre-industrial England John Patten, 1979 Marxism and the City Ira Katznelson, 1992 In this work Katznelson critically analyzes the development of Marxist scholarship on cities in the last quarter century. He demonstrates how some of the most important weaknesses in Marxism as a social theory can be remedied by forcing it to seriously engage with cities and spatial concerns and explains the significant shortcomings even of this improved Marxism. Katznelson explores how a Marxism that is open to engagement with other social theoretical traditions can help illuminate our understanding of cities and the patterns of class and group formation that have characterized urban life in the West. Worlds Within Worlds Steve Rappaport, 2002-04-04 A study of urban life in early modern Britain which combines sophisticated quantitative analysis with vivid empirical detail. Guilds and the Parish Community in Late Medieval East Anglia, C. 1470-1550 Ken Farnhill, 2001 The social and religious functions of the fraternities are then compared with the parish through a study of the records of two Norfolk market towns Wymondham and Swaffham and two Suffolk villages Bardwell and Cratfield. The evidence illuminates the role of the guilds in the social and religious life of the local community along with their position within the parish hierarchy. A final chapter studies the fortunes of the guilds during the early years of the Reformation up to their dissolution in 1548. Author Sam Griffiths argues that the social theory of cities in this period was characterised by the dominance of socio economic and linguistic cultural models which served to impede our understanding of time space relationality towards historical events and their narration. The book engages with studies of historical writing to discuss materiality in the built environment as a form of literary practice to express marginalised dimensions of social experience in a range of historical contexts. It then moves on to reflect on England's nineteenth century industrialization from an architectural topographical perspective challenging theories of space and architecture to examine the complex role of industrial cities in mediating social changes in the practice of everyday life. By demonstrating how the authenticity of historical accounts rests on materially emplaced narratives Griffiths makes the case for the emancipatory possibilities of historical writing. He calls for a re-evaluation of historical epistemology as a primarily socio scientific or literary enquiry and instead proposes a specifically architectural time space figuration of historical events to rethink and refresh the relationship of the urban past to its present and future. Written for postgraduate students researchers and academics in architectural theory and urban studies Griffiths draws on the space syntax tradition of research to explore how contingencies of movement and encounter construct the
