Prehistoric Fish Catches In New Zealand:

Prehistoric Fish Catches in New Zealand Foss Leach, Angela S. Boocock, 1993 Evidence for the fish catches of pre European Maori people derived from archaeological sites Text summarises the results which are presented in 240pp on fiche

Human Impacts on Ancient Marine Ecosystems Torben C. Rick, Jon M. Erlandson, 2008-04-29 An excellent volume with mature sophisticated comprehensive research by leaders in the fields of archaeology zooarchaeology and paleoarchaeology that will be useful to scientists of many interests David Steadman author of Extinction and Biogeography of Tropical Pacific Birds This volume will make a significant contribution to our understanding of ancient human impacts on marine ecosystems which will be of interest to all researchers who are concerned about the environment The editors and contributors are commended for their efforts on this significant research topic Steven R James coeditor of The Archaeology of Global Change The Impact of Humans on Their Environment

Archaeology in New Zealand, 2001 Taking the High Ground Atholl Anderson, Douglas J. Kennett, 2012-11-01 This volume brings the remote and little known island of Rapa firmly to the forefront of Polynesian archaeology Thirteen authors contribute 14 chapters covering not only the basic archaeology of coastal sites rock shelters and fortifications but faunal remains agricultural development and marine exploitation The results presented within a chronology framed by Bayesian analysis are set against a background of ethnohistory and ethnology Highly unusual in tropical Polynesian archaeology are descriptions of artefacts of perishable material Taking the High Ground provides important insights into how a group of Polynesian settlers adapted to an isolated and in some ways restrictive environment

Fishing in Pre-European New Zealand Foss Leach, 2006 This authoritative volume draws together a broad range of information about pre European Maori fishing in a well illustrated and very readable form The author uses identifications and measurements of fish remains from 126 archaeological sites covering the full time span of prehistoric New Zealand to describe the range of fish caught by pre European Maori explore variations between regions and through time and examine the impact of Maori on the fishery The archaeological information is placed in a series of wider contexts the Pacific background to Maori fishing the nature of the New Zealand fishery climatic fluctuations during the last millennium and the nutritional requirements of human diet and the role of marine food in it The discussion of the technology and material culture of fishing breaks new ground in its treatment of cordage and knots netting and fish hooks canoe design fish preservation and cooking methods Research on fish behaviour towards hooks provides much needed insight into the reason why the rotating hook so common amongst early Maori and other Pacific island peoples was so successful The author shows that pre European Maori had a different approach to conservation of the marine environment than is currently employed in modern fisheries management and that claims of pre European over exploitation of snapper and other species are ill founded An especially important finding is that the average size of fish increased over time following the strategy of taking large numbers of what would now be considered under sized fish New Zealand had super abundant fish stocks right up to the time of first European settlement and all necessary marine food was obtained in shallow waters less than 100 m from the shore Pre European Maori fishermen in New Zealand are shown to have been extremely knowledgeable about all aspects of the New Zealand fishery Australian Archaeologist Atholl Anderson, Tim Murray, 2000 New Zealand Journal of Archaeology, 2005 Estimating Live Fish Catches from Archaeological Bone Fragments of Snapper, Pagrus Auratus Foss Leach, 1995 Five paired cranial bones and the otoliths of a modern sample of 110 New Zealand snapper Pagrus auratus were weighed and measured and regression analysis performed against live fork length and ungutted weight A number of regression models and alternative steps in arriving at estimates were examined Detailed analysis of residuals was used to distinguish between strategies Fork length could be estimated with a standard error of less than 20mm and weight to less than 140 g For the latter a two step procedure is suggested from bone dimension to fork length and from this to live weight using a sample of 833 fish Coefficients are provided for 64 equations linking bone size to live characteristics To reconstruct a size frequency histogram of a prehistoric fish catch it is acceptable to measure all bones from a particular species even though the number of measurements may greatly exceed the MNI Minimum Number of Individuals for that species Publisher's description The Estimation of Live Fish Size from Archaeological Cranial Bones of the New Zealand Kahawai Arripis Trutta, 1996 Archaeology in Oceania, 2005 Asian Perspectives, 2001 The Miwa Project Gina Lee Barnes, Masaaki Okita, 1978 The Exploitation and Cultural Importance of Sea Mammals International Council for Archaeozoology. Conference, 2005 Humans are known to exploit plant and animal resources for a variety of purposes Subsistence is the most obvious of these but there are also social and technological reasons behind such activities not to mention ideological and spiritual motives for exploitation In order to maximise exploitation of resources human often exploit ecotones where several ecological zones exist in close proximity The seashore is such an ecotone and sea mammals are just one of many groups of resources who are available here This volume looks to address some of the vast array of coastal adaptations that have occurred during the human past and the role that sea mammals have played in them The Prehistory of New Zealand Janet Davidson, 1987 Tuhinga, 2007 The Ancient History of the Maori John White, 1887 The Ancient History of the Maori: Horo-uta or Taki tumu migration John White, 1887 An official collection of Maori historical traditions BIM The Zoological Record, 2001 In the Land of the Ichthyophagi Mark J. Beech, 2004 Abu Dhabi Islands Archaeological Survey Monograph 1 Fishing forms an important activity in many societies throughout the world today and played a significant role in the life and subsistence of many prehistoric societies Past archaeological research on fishing has often tended to concentrate on particular sites or chronological periods This study aims to adopt an interdisciplinary approach to model regional interactions between coastal communities and their environment The geographical framework for this study is the Arabian Gulf Gulf of Oman with a particular focus on the southern Gulf region and present day coastline of the United Arab Emirates The environmental and archaeological background to the region is considered first and modern fisheries data as well as ethnographic data relating to traditional fisheries is presented An evaluation is carried out of all the archaeological evidence for the adoption of particular fisheries technology The principal data forming the basis for this study are 23 archaeological fish bone assemblages from sites located throughout the Arabian Gulf Gulf of Oman The chronological focus is from the 5th millennium BC to the Late Islamic period In order to comprehend the regional variation in fisheries sites were selected on the basis that they represented a variety of site types in different environments scattered throughout the region This research provides for the first time a detailed insight into the status of past fisheries resources in the region as well as an insight into the fishing strategies utilised by the early coastal inhabitants of the Gulf during the course of the past 7000 years The work s special focus is on the use of biometrical techniques to enable size reconstruction of economically important fish groups The overall aim of this research the first in a planned series of Abu Dhabi Islands Archaeological Survey Monographs is to consider the interactions between the goals of the coastal societies their fishing strategies and environment the work overall goes some way towards addressingsome of the key questions of relevance to the archaeology of south east Arabia
