Prehistoric Hillforts In Devon:

Prehistoric Hillforts in Devon Aileen Fox, 1996 Landscape and Society in Dumnonia Stephen Rippon, 2025-08-15
Explores South West England's development from the Iron Age through medieval times focusing on Ipplepen. This book explores the distinctive landscape and society of South West England that had emerged by the Iron Age and which continued to develop during the Roman and medieval periods. A focus of the research was the long term programme of survey and excavation on the Iron Age Roman and early medieval settlement at Dainton Elms Cross in Ipplepen, Devon, which included the only Roman roadside settlement to have seen extensive excavation to the south and west of Exeter on the very edge of the Roman empire as well as a substantial early medieval cemetery. First discovered through the reporting of an unusual concentration of Roman finds to the Portable Antiquities Scheme, the site was investigated through a joint university and community project led by the University of Exeter in partnership with the British Museum, PAS Devon County Council and Cotswold Archaeology. What for the South West of England was exceptional preservation meant that large amounts of animal bone, charred cereals and human remains were preserved alongside a regionally important material culture assemblage. The site, which had been occupied for c. 1200 years, was abandoned around the 8th century AD. A programme of documentary, place name and historic landscape research across a study area extending from the coast up onto Dartmoor explores the context of this major landscape change, which appears to have been associated with the appearance of hamlets and open fields and the fragmentation of an early folk territory. Together, the excavations in Ipplepen and the wider contextual research reveal how communities living in South West England developed a distinctive identity that reflects a well-developed understanding of their region's natural environment alongside a degree of ambivalence to outside cultural influences.

Making Sense of an Historic Landscape Stephen Rippon, 2012-07-12. This volume explores how the archaeologist or historian can understand variations in landscapes. Making use of a wide range of sources and techniques, including archaeological material, documentary sources and maps, Rippon illustrates how local and regional variations in the historic landscape can be understood.

Landscape in the Longue Durée Christopher Tilley, 2017-10-06. Pebbles are usually found only on the beach in the liminal space between land and sea. But what happens when pebbles extend inland and create a ridge brushing against the sky? Landscape in the Longue Durée is a 4,000-year history of pebbles. It is based on the results of a four-year archaeological research project of the east Devon Pebblebed Heathlands, a fascinating and geologically unique landscape in the UK whose bedrock is composed entirely of water-rounded pebbles. Christopher Tilley uses this landscape to argue that pebbles are like no other kind of stone; they occupy an especial place both in the prehistoric past and in our contemporary culture. It is for this reason that we must re-think continuity and change in a radically new way by considering embodied relations between people and things over the long term. Dividing the book into two parts, Tilley first explores the prehistoric landscape from the Mesolithic to the end of the Iron Age and follows with an analysis of the same landscape from the eighteenth into the twenty first century The major findings of the four year study are revealed through this chronological journey from archaeological discoveries such as the excavation of three early Bronze Age cairns to the documentation of all 829 surviving pebble structures and beyond to the impact of the landscape on local economies and its importance today as a military training camp The results of the study will inform many disciplines including archaeology cultural and art history anthropology conservation and landscape studies

Hillforts of the Iron Age in England and Wales James L. Forde-Johnston, 1976 Marking Place Jonathan Last, 2022-01-11 Much archaeological work is concerned with identifying gaps in our knowledge and developing strategies for addressing them we perhaps spend less time thinking about how research should proceed when we already know relatively speaking quite a lot The program of dating causewayed enclosures in southern Britain that was published in 2011 as Gathering Time Oxbow Books gave us a new more precise chronology for many individual sites as well as for enclosures as a whole and as a consequence a far better sense of their significance and place in the story of the British Early Neolithic Arguably causewayed enclosures are now the best understood type of Neolithic monument Yet work continues and in the last few years new discoveries have been made older excavations published and further work undertaken on well known sites Viewing this research within the new framework for these monuments allows us to assess where our understanding of enclosures has got to and where the focus of future research should lie This volume originates from a Neolithic Studies Group meeting held in November 2019 which aimed firstly to showcase and explore the wide range of current work on causewayed enclosures and related sites and secondly to assess what we still want to know about these sites in light of the monumental achievement of Gathering Time The papers collected here comprise reports on recent development led fieldwork academic research and community projects and the volume concludes with a reflection by the authors of Gathering Time

The Later Iron Age in Britain and Beyond Colin Haselgrove, Thomas Hugh Moore, 2007 Over the years there has been a major shift in Iron Age studies This volume contains thirty one papers which covers the Later Iron Age that is taken to be circa 400 300 BC until the Roman Conquest

Beacons in the Landscape Ian Brown, 2009-07-20 Of all Britain's great archaeological monuments the Iron Age hillforts have arguably had the most profound impact on the landscape if only because there are so many yet we know very little about them Were they recognised as being something special by those who created them or is the hillfort purely an archaeologists construct How were they constructed who lived in them and to what uses were they put This book which is richly illustrated with photography of sites throughout England and Wales addresses these and many other questions After discussing the difficult issue of definition and the great excavations on which our knowledge is based Ian Brown investigates in turn hillforts origins their architecture and the role they played in Iron Age society He also discusses the latest theories about their location social significance and chronology The book provides a valuable synthesis of the rich vein of research carried out in Britain on hillforts over the last thirty years Hillforts great variability poses many problems and this book should help guide both the specialist and non specialist alike though the complex literature Furthermore it has an important conservation objective Land use in the modern era has not been kind to these monuments with a significant number either disfigured or lost Public consciousness of their importance needs raising if their management is to be improved and their future assured

The Field Archaeology of Exmoor Hazel Riley, Robert Wilson-North, 2001 The result of original survey work on Exmoor which sought out evidence from prehistoric stone settings and burial mounds to medieval castles lost settlements and 19th century industrial remains

Book of Prehistoric Settlements Robert Bewley, 1994 How and where did Britain's prehistoric ancestors live during the 8000 years between the end of the Ice Age and the arrival of the Romans in AD43 In tracing the variety and development of British settlements from the hunter gatherers of the Mesolithic to the tribes of the Iron Ages the author takes a fresh look at all the key sites

Prehistoric and Roman Landscapes Andrew J. Fleming, Richard Hingley, 2007 As the essays in this book demonstrate Prehistoric and Romano British landscape studies have come a long way since Hoskins whose work reflected the prevailing Celtic ethnological narrative of Britain before the medieval period The contributors present a stimulating survey of the subject as it is in the early twenty first century and provide some sense of a research frontier where new conceptualisations of otherness and new research techniques are transforming our understanding
