Monumentality in Later Prehistory Harold Mytum, 2013-08-17 This volume provides the results of a 30 year excavation reconstruction and public interpretation campaign at the late prehistoric inland promontory settlement of Castell Henllys here focusing on the defensive sequence and the role of monumentality in later prehistory The site has international significance because of the extensive excavations of the Iron Age palisaded settlement and later earthen ramparts complex gateway and chevaux de frise of upright stones It is now widely recognised that the Iron Age consisted of many regional cultural traditions and the excavations at Castell Henllys provide a vital contrast to the well known large hillfort communities in other parts of England and Wales as well as across Europe As such it is a unique window into a widespread but largely ignored site category and form of social and economic organisation The publication will provide a case study for the construction and use of the earthworks of a major European late prehistoric settlement type the Iron Age hillfort the monumental construction is compared with other communal investments such as the Mississippian mounds It will also offer an innovative form of site reporting including alternative interpretations of the earthworks as either military defences or the community binding symbols Along with Excavation Experiment and Heritage Interpretation Castell Henllys Hillfort Then and Now these books will be required reading by those studying the late prehistoric archaeology of Britain and Europe at advanced undergraduate and postgraduate level and by those in North America studying complex societies monumentality and ways of writing archaeology The Archaeology of Pouterua Doug G. Sutton, Louise Furey, Y. M. Marshall, 2003 The third book to emerge from the Pouterua Project focuses on the pa itself and explores the innovative attempt to use archaeological techniques to explore and understand socio political processes This book should be of interest to scholars students and amateur archaeologists and historians The Archaeology of Food and Warfare Amber M. VanDerwarker, Gregory D. Wilson, 2015-08-03 The archaeologies of food and warfare have independently developed over the past several decades This volume aims to provide concrete linkages between these research topics through the examination of case studies worldwide Topics considered within the book include the impacts of warfare on the daily food quest warfare and nutritional health ritual foodways and violence the provisioning of warriors and armies status based changes in diet during times of war logistical constraints on military campaigns and violent competition over subsistence resources The diversity of perspectives included in this volume may be a product of new ways of conceptualizing violence not simply as an isolated component of a society nor as an attribute of a particular societal type but instead as a transformative process that is lived and irrevocably alters social economic and political organization and relationships This book highlights this transformative process by presenting a cross cultural perspective on the connection between war and food through the inclusion of case studies from several continents

Archaeology in New Zealand ,1997 Making Peoples James Belich, 2002-02-28 Now in paper This immensely readable book full of drama and humor as well as scholarship is a watershed in the writing of New Zealand history In making many new assertions and challenging many historical myths it seeks to reinterpret our approach to the past Given New Zealand s small population short history and great isolation the history of the archipelago has been saddled with a reputation for mundanity According to James Belich however it is just these characteristics that make New Zealand a historian s paradise a laboratory whose isolation size and recency is an advantage in which the grand themes of world history are often played out more rapidly more separately and therefore more discernably than elsewhere The first of two planned volumes Making Peoples begins with the Polynesian settlement and its development into the Maori tribes in the eleventh century It traces the great encounter between independent Maoridom and expanding Europe from 1642 to 1916 including the foundation of the Pakeha the neo Europeans of New Zealand between the 1830s and the 1880s It describes the forging of a neo Polynesia and a neo Britain and the traumatic interaction between them The author carefully examines the myths and realities that drove the colonialization process and suggests a new living version of one of the most critical and controversial documents in New Zealand s history the Treaty of Waitangi frequently described as New Zealand s Magna Carta The construction of peoples Maori and Pakeha is a recurring theme the response of each to the great shift from extractive to sustainable economics their relationship with their Hawaiis or ancestors with each other and with myth Essential reading for anyone interested in New Zealand history and in the history of new societies in general Iron Age Hillforts in Britain and Beyond Dennis Harding, 2012-12-06 Widely regarded as major visible field monuments of the Iron Age hillforts are central to an understanding of later prehistoric communities in Britain and Europe from the later Bronze Age With such a range of variants represented no single explanation of their function or social significance could satisfy all possible interpretations of their role While they are conventionally viewed as defence settlements or regional centres controlled by a social elite this role has been challenged in recent years and instead hillforts are being considered primarily as expressions of social identity with strong ritual and cosmological associations Current hillfort interpretations are in danger of reflecting contemporary social sensitivities more strongly than any recognizable Iron Age priorities and the need for critical analysis of basic archaeological evidence is paramount Critically reviewing the evidence of hillforts in Britain in the wider context of Ireland and continental Europe the volume focuses on their structural features chronology landscape context and their social economic and symbolic functions and is well illustrated throughout with site plans reconstruction drawings and photographs Harding reviews the changing perceptions of hillforts and the future prospects for hillfort research highlighting aspects of contemporary investigation and interpretation Otago University Monographs in Prehistoric Anthropology ,1969
