The Rock-Art of Eastern North America Carol Diaz-Granados, James Richard Duncan, 2004-11-28 In archaeology rock art any long lasting marking made on a natural surface is similar to material culture pottery and tools because it provides a record of human activity and ideology at that site. Petroglyphs, pictographs and dendroglyphs (tree carvings) have been discovered and recorded throughout the eastern woodlands of North America on boulders, bluffs and trees in caves and in rock shelters. These cultural remnants scattered on the landscape can tell us much about the belief systems of the inhabitants that left them behind. The Rock Art of Eastern North America brings together 20 papers.

From Carnac to Callanish Aubrey Burl, Dr Aubrey Burl, 1993-01-01 This book discusses the lines of standing stones that until now have been the neglected wonders of prehistoric Europe. Rows that were foci of rituals in Britain, Ireland and Brittany for over two thousand years. Places such as Carnac in Brittany and Callanish in the Hebrides are visited by many visitors each year but before now there has been no book that seriously explains the history, significance and background to these impressive sites. Aubrey Burl shows that the settings vary from pairs of isolated stones in the far south west of Ireland to networks of long lines in Scotland, Dartmoor and Brittany and describes the types in a sequence of architectural chapters that stress the increasing social and commercial connections between regions hundreds of miles apart. He uses information from a wide variety of sources: excavation reports, megalithic art, astronomical analyses and legends to provide explanations of why the rows were erected when and what they may have been used for.
