Prehistoric Architecture In The Eastern United States:

Prehistoric Architecture in the Eastern United States William N. Morgan, 1980 Ancient Architecture of the Southwest William N. Morgan, 2014-03-07 During more than a thousand years before Europeans arrived in 1540 the native peoples of what is now the southwestern United States and northern Mexico developed an architecture of rich diversity and beauty. Vestiges of thousands of these dwellings and villages still remain in locations ranging from Colorado in the north to Chihuahua in the south and from Nevada in the west to eastern New Mexico a geographical area of some 300 000 square miles. This study presents a comprehensive architectural survey of the region. Professionally rendered drawings comparatively analyze 132 sites by means of standardized 100 foot grids with uniform orientations. Reconstructed plans with shadows representing vertical heights suggest the original appearances of many structures that are now in ruins or no longer exist while concise texts place them in context. Organized in five chronological sections that include 132 professionally rendered site drawings the book examines architectural evolution from humble pit houses to sophisticated multistory pueblos. The sections explore concurrent Mogollon Hohokam and Anasazi developments as well as those in the Salado Sinagua Virgin River Kayenta and other areas and compare their architecture to contemporary developments in parts of eastern North America and Mesoamerica. The book concludes with a discussion of changes in Native American architecture in response to European influences. Written for a general audience the book holds appeal for all students of native Southwestern cultures as well as for everyone interested in origins in architecture. In particular it should encourage younger Native American architects to value their rich cultural heritage and to respond as creatively to the challenges of the future as their ancestors did to those of the past.

Prehistoric Architecture in Micronesia William N. Morgan, 2010-07-26 In the many centuries preceding Western contact a richly diverse and innovative architectural tradition reached maturity in the western Pacific. Prehistoric Architecture in Micronesia the first modern study of this remarkable work reveals that there is no such thing as primitive architecture but only primitive means. This study presents five distinctly different examples of Micronesia's ancient architecture. The sites include the extraordinary stone cities of Leluh and Nan Madol on the islands of Kosrae and Pohnpei respectively. Other structures include the meeting houses and residences built on hexagonal stone platforms in the Yap Islands the earth terraces and ornately decorated meeting houses of Palau and the megalithic columns and capstones of prehistoric houses in the Mariana Islands. These structures are illustrated by photographs maps plans and other drawings. Many of the basic data come from archaeological investigations of the specific sites. Summaries at the ends of chapters and in the concluding section compare the architectural characteristics of the island groups with each other and with monuments outside Micronesia. One of the most remarkable achievements of any ancient people the prehistoric architecture of Micronesia is a source of continuing inspiration for persons who search for meaning in the built form of our present day environment.
