Mississippian Community Organization

Michael J. O'Brien,2005-12-11 The Powers Phase Project was a multiyear archaeological program undertaken in southeastern Missouri by the University of Michigan in the late 1960s and early 1970s The project focused on the occupation of a large Pleistocene age terrace in the Little Black River Lowland a large expanse of lowlying land just east of the Ozark Highland between roughly A D 1250 and A D 1400 The largest site in the region is Powers Fort a palisaded mound center that ceived archaeological attention as early as the late nineteenth century Archa logical surveys conducted south of Powers Fort in the 1960s revealed the pr ence of numerous smaller sites of varying size that contained artifact assemblages similar to those from the larger center Collectively the settlement aggregation became known as the Powers phase Test excavations indicated that at least some of the smaller sites contained burned structures and that the burning had sealed household items on the floors below the collapsed architectural e ments Thus there appeared to be an opportunity to examine a late prehistoric settlement system to a degree not possible previously Not only could the s tial relation of communities in the system be ascertained but the fact that str tures within the communities had burned appeared to provide a unique opp tunity to examine such things as differences in household items between and among structures and where various activities had occurred within a house With these ideas in mind James B Griffin and James E

Archaeological Hammers and Theories

James A. Moore,Arthur S. Keene,2014-05-10 Studies in Archaeology Archaeological Hammers and Theories provides information pertinent to the archeological method with emphasis on the interaction of data and technique with theory and problems This book describes the nature of archeological data the range of archeological theories and the scope of archeological problems Organized into three parts encompassing 13 chapters this book begins with an overview of the products of the archeological record This text then examines survey sampling site formation studies and lithic and ceramic analysis Other chapters consider the behavioral concepts that are implicit in the notions of special behavior optimization decision making and population dynamics This book discusses as well the analysis of pottery which plays a leading part in the reconstruction of culture histories in archeology The final chapter suggests an alternative set of philosophical issues that might serve to focus a philosophy or archeology This book is a valuable resource for archeologists Modern Material Culture Richard A.
