Hall, G.H. Cannell, H.W. Lawton, 2012-12-06 The semi arid zones of the world are fragile ecosystems which are being substantially modified by the activities of mankind

Increasing human populations have resulted in greater demands on semi arid zones for providing human sustenance and the possibility that this may enhance desertification is a grave concern. These zones are harsh habitats for humans. The famines that resulted from drought during the late 1960s and the 1970s in the African Sahel illustrated the unreliability of present agricultural systems in this zone. Large fluctuations in agricultural production have occurred in semi arid zones of Australia, North America and the Soviet Union due to periodic droughts even though considerable agricultural technology has been devoted to agricultural development in these zones. The challenge to mankind is to manage these different semi arid zones so that productivity is increased and stabilized and environmental deterioration is decreased. Irrigation can be used to increase and stabilize agricultural production in semi arid zones as discussed in Volume 5 of this series Arid Zone Irrigation. The present volume Agriculture in Semi Arid Environments focuses on dryland farming in semi arid zones and is relevant to the large areas of the world where rainfall is limiting and where water is not available for irrigation. This volume is designed to assist agricultural development in these areas and consists of reviews and analyses of available information by scientists working in Africa, Australia and at the University of California.

Integrating theoretical approaches with archaeological data from the Middle East, Mesoamerica, North and South America, Egypt, China, the Indus Valley and temperate Europe. Patterns in Prehistory Fifth Edition reveals how archaeologists decipher the past. It demonstrates how theory and method are combined to derive interpretations and also considers how interpretations evolve as a result of accumulating data, technological advances in recording and analyzing data sets and newer theoretical perspectives.
