Rita Maria Serra, Valeria Pomponi, Andrea Montella, Maria Alessandra Sotgiu, Alessio Pirino, Vittorio Mazzarello, Pasquale Bandiera

Department of Biomedical Sciences, University of Sassari, Italy

Following the discovery of burials in Monte Carru – Alghero (Sardinia) during the preliminary investigation to the creation of a housing development detected a Imperial Roman necropolis (I-III century A.D.). A total of 350 tombs – 150 burials and 200 cremations. This necropolis is supposed belongs to the undiscovered village of Carbia mentioned by the sources.

Up to now have been analyzed 11 burials. The samples are cleaned by water and glued with PVA glue. Subsequently has been performed the anthropological study following the mains anthropological methods (Meindl & Lovejoy, 1985; Iscan 1985; Ubelaker 1989; Trotter & Gleser 1952) and some new method (Vance – Steyn- L'Abbé 2011; Chibba e Bidmos, 2007; Bidmos, 2006). Every burial has been sampled for metagenomic and DNA study.

Up to now have been analyzed 10 adults and 1 subadult. The adults are in 60% female and just 1 is undeterminate; the age of death is between 25 and 45 years; it was no possible to determinate the height .

There were no obvious pathology but this can be for the extreme deterioration of bones. There are dental wear widespread mainly on premolars and first molar ; caries is present mainly on molars and dental calculus mainly on incisors.

The analyzed population of Monte Carru in Roman Age shows a good state of health, no obvious pathologies and a enamel wear. More analyses are necessary to better understand the site.

Archeological Investigations in Cochiti Reservoir, New Mexico Jan V. Biella, Richard C. Chapman, 1977 This report represents the third in a publication series which summarizes the results of a multiphase cultural resource management program in Cochiti Reservoir New Mexico The present phase of the research concerns a program for mitigation for those archeological sites which will be directly impacted by the floodwaters between 5322 and 5400 foot elevations retained in Cochiti Reservoir During the course of the mitigation program twenty sites that span late Archaic En Medio phase Anasazi Pueblo III Pueblo IV and Historic Spanish Colonial Territorial periods have been investigated The site reports and appendices to this volume provide descriptive summaries of the results of the mitigation program at the intrasite level of analysis

Processual Archaeology Amber Johnson, 2004-11-30 Processual archaeologists seek to explain variability in the static archaeological record we observe in the present as a necessary first step toward learning how to learn about the operation of cultural dynamics in the past The approach is a diverse and productive one that focuses on developing learning strategies Researchers pursuing processual archaeology have already discovered a great deal about the archaeological record and about past dynamics and there is a huge potential for building on the foundation laid thus far The contributors to this volume provide clearly written research articles that are easily accessible to upper level undergraduates and professional archaeologists Although the papers do not focus on a single region time period or domain of observation e g settlement patterns or lithics or site structure they are integrated by shared goals for archaeology This book clearly demonstrates that processual archaeology far from having been replaced by post processual archaeology is becoming more and more powerful as our analytic sophistication and knowledge of the archaeological record grow Archaeology and Economic Development Paul Burtenshaw, 2017-12-02 Nowhere in archaeology is the gap between theory and practice more evident than in its ambivalent engagement with economic development This groundbreaking volume assembles practicing archaeologists economists and NGO officials in an extensive exploration of the theoretical practical and ethical issues raised by archaeologists use of cultural heritage to support economic development The first chapters consider the problem of articulating the value of tangible and intangible heritage when economic measures alone are inadequate Subsequent chapters present regional perspectives on archaeology and development and present a host of case studies from around the globe that describe archaeologists development projects including some that are successful and others that are less so These studies both suggest best practices in the implementation of development projects and illuminate the obstacles to success created by political conflict and competing human needs Ethical issues and practical considerations converge in chapters that explore the role that members of local communities should play in the design management and governance of archaeological and heritage resources In this volume archaeologists and heritage professionals will encounter a thought provoking international discourse concerning the path forward for archaeology as the field engages with economic
