The scientific frontier is a term used by Prime Minister Benjamin Disraeli Lord Beaconsfield of Great Britain in 1878 to denote a border between British India in present day Pakistan and Afghanistan which could be occupied and defended according to the requirements of the science of military strategy as opposed to the existing frontier which had been formed by a haphazard pattern of British expansion through agreements and annexations. The term subsequently figured prominently in British discussions about the defense of British India from a possible Russian invasion through Afghanistan. Our Scientific Frontier published toward the end of the Second Anglo Afghan War 1878-80 is an analysis of this subject written to influence the British debate on the terms of peace. The author William Patrick Andrew was chairman of the Scinde Punjab and Delhi Railway Company and thus an expert on logistics and transport in India and along its frontiers. The book contains chapters on the Northwest Frontier, the history, geography and economy of Afghanistan, the independent border, tribes, mountain passes, probable routes of invasion from Afghanistan into India, and the Powindahs or Soldier Merchants of Afghanistan. Three appendices cover the Sherpur entrenchments that were part of the defense of Kabul, the Bolan and Khyber railways, neither of which was constructed until after the period discussed, and transport by rail of troops, horses, guns, and war material in India. Biblical Researches in Palestine, and in the Adjacent Regions Eli Smith, 1874
