Speaking for the People Mark Rifkin, 2021-08-03 In Speaking for the People Mark Rifkin examines nineteenth century Native writings to reframe contemporary debates around Indigenous recognition refusal and resurgence Rifkin shows how works by Native authors William Apsess Elias Boudinot Sarah Winnemucca and Zitkala-a illustrate the intellectual labor involved in representing modes of Indigenous political identity and placemaking These writers highlight the complex processes involved in negotiating the character contours and scope of Indigenous sovereignties under ongoing colonial occupation Rifkin argues that attending to these writers engagements with non native publics helps provide further analytical tools for addressing the complexities of Indigenous governance on the ground both then and now Thinking about Native peoplehood and politics as a matter of form opens possibilities for addressing the difficult work involved in navigating among varied possibilities for conceptualizing and enacting peoplehood in the context of continuing settler intervention As Rifkin demonstrates attending to writings by these Indigenous intellectuals provides ways of understanding Native governance as a matter of deliberation discussion and debate emphasizing the open ended unfinishedness of self determination

Critical Perspectives on Colonialism Fiona Paisley, Kirsty Reid, 2013-11-20 This collection brings much needed focus to the vibrancy and vitality of minority and marginal writing about empire and to their implications as expressions of embodied contact between imperial power and those negotiating its consequences from below The chapters explore how less powerful and less privileged actors in metropolitan and colonial societies within the British Empire have made use of the written word and of the power of speech public performance and street politics This book breaks new ground by combining work about marginalized figures from within Britain as well as counterparts in the colonies ranging from published sources such as indigenous newspapers to ordinary and everyday writings including diaries letters petitions ballads suicide notes and more Each chapter engages with the methodological implications of working with everyday scribbles and asks what these alternate modernities and histories mean for the larger critique of the imperial archive that has shaped much of the most interesting writing on empire in the past decade
