Ellis Merton Coulter's 1955 work Wormsloe and provides the most complete account to date of the De Rennes. Beyond the story of the De Renne family, Bragg also reveals much about the history of collecting and of the antiquarian book trade as well as of the evolution of Georgia historical documentation. Appendix material includes genealogical tables and lists of collections and publications making De Renne Three Generations of a Georgia Family an invaluable source for all scholars and aficionados of southern history.

Selected Anjana Ahuja, Mark van Vugt, 2010-08-26 We are all leaders or followers or both. We can recognise leadership in almost every area of life in the workplace among friends within families in politics and religion. But what makes a good or bad leader? Why are some people followers and what are the benefits of each? Fusing psychology, business history and current affairs, Selected examines how and why leadership has evolved over tens of thousands of years and presents a bold and compelling new mismatch hypothesis that the slowness of evolution means that there is a mismatch between modern ideas of leadership and the kind of leadership that our Stone Age brains are still wired for. This makes for all sorts of tendencies, problems and solutions that no author has yet discussed but that affect all aspects of our lives. It's why, for example, we prefer working in small companies. Full of fascinating examples drawn from a diverse range of spheres from politics and commerce to sport and culture, Van Vugt and Ahuja show our evolutionary history explains why taller political candidates usually win, why women chief executives attract such hostility and why we like it when the boss asks after our children. This is the first book of its kind to explore how the evolution of leadership affects us all and by doing so to provide deep practical insight for all of us into our personal and professional lives.

Georgia AnchorAge, 1990

Between King Cotton and Queen Victoria Beau Cleland, 2025-12 Between King Cotton and Queen Victoria recenters our understanding of the Civil War by framing it as a hemispheric affair deeply influenced by the actions of a network of private parties and minor officials in the Confederacy and British territory in and around North America. John Wilkes Booth likely would not have been in a position to assassinate Abraham Lincoln, for example, without the logistical support and assistance of the pro-Confederate network in Canada. That network to which he was personally introduced in Montreal in the fall of 1864 was hosted and facilitated by willing colonials across the hemisphere. Many of its Confederate members arrived in British North America via a long-established transportation and communications network built around British colonies, especially Bermuda and the Bahamas, whose primary purpose was running the blockade. It is difficult to overstate how essential blockade running was for the rebellion's survival and it would have been impossible without the aid of sympathetic colonials. The operations of this informal semiprivate network were of enormous consequence for the course of the war and its aftermath and our understanding of the Civil War is incomplete without a deeper reckoning with the power and potential for chaos of these private networks imbued with the power of a state.

Monthly Packet of Evening Readings for Members of the English Church (earlier "for Younger Members of the English Church"), 1896 Lost in Transition thematic and chronological exploration of twentieth century removal and resettlement projects across southern Appalachia. The book shares complex stories of loss and recollection that have grown and evolved over time. This edited volume contains seven case studies of public land removal actions in Virginia, Kentucky, the Carolinas, and Tennessee from the 1930s through the 1960s. Some of the removals include the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Norris Basin, Shenandoah National Park, and the New River. The Great Smoky Mountains National Park and the Keowee-Toxaway Project in northwestern South Carolina. Each essay asks key questions: How did governmental entities throughout the twentieth century deal with land acquisition and removal of families and communities? What do the oral histories of the families and communities, particularly from different generations, tell us about the legacies of these removals? This collection reveals confrontations between past and present federal agencies and citizens and the original accounts of removal and resettlement and contemporary interpretations. The result is a blending of practical historical concerns with contemporary nostalgia and romanticism which often deepens the complexity of Appalachian cultural life. Lost in Transition provides a nuanced and insightful study of removal and resettlement projects that applies critical analysis of fact, mythology, and storytelling. It illustrates the important role of place in southern Appalachian history. This collection is a helpful resource to anthropologists, folklorists, and Appalachian studies scholars and a powerful volume of stories for all readers who reflect upon the importance of place and home.

Savannah, Charleston & the Carolina Coast, 2004 Master-missionaries Alexander Hay Japp, 1880 Second Chance at Love: Intimate Scoundrels Cathy Thacker, 1983 Dictionary of Painters and Engravers Michael Bryan, 1889

Master-missionaries, chapters in pioneer effort throughout the world Alexander Hay Japp, 1884 The Millionaire of Love David Leddick, 2006. Radomir is the epitome of Quentin Crisp's concept of the millionaire of love: a beauty who is loved and desired by both women and men. However, he holds little patience for Nevis's attentions. His constant rebuffs fail to dissuade the fixated older man who in turn almost revels in the emotional pain he experiences from rejection. Helpless against his own feelings, Nevis must do battle with his emotions to save his dignity and any chance he has left for happiness. The Millionaire of Love reveals the inner thoughts and feelings of both men, showing that no matter how deeply we descend into inescapable passion and unrequited love, we need to value all that we learn, no matter what our age. BOOK JACKET
